Protection from Ourselves

Brooke and I have four kids under eight-years-old. To us, they will always be our "babies," and even though they are growing up quickly, they are far from grown! Like many of you, it did not take long for our eldest to begin asking for a cell phone. I'll spare you the drama; it ain't happening for a good while! Every time the subject comes up, she begs, tries to persuade, thinks we just don't want her to have fun, and she generally doesn't understand the bigger picture.

We know that there will come a day when we will get her a phone, but for now, the answer is "no." But the answer isn't "no" because we are cruel or greedy or preying on her downfall. The truth is that we are protecting her. Protecting her from a future she doesn't understand. Protecting her from pitfalls she cannot wrap her mind around. Protecting her from dark habits that could damage her social, emotional, and mental development. Protect her from darkness that her heart doesn't need to be exposed to.

I think we can see the validity of such thinking, but we forget that the same logic applies to our heavenly Father and us as His children. His infinite wisdom, knowledge, foresight, and love mean he can be trusted with his "no," especially when we think our way is better.

The fact of the matter is that our kids will one day look back in gratitude that we cared enough to say no. There's a good chance that if we caved and said yes, while the gratification would be there for now, later in life our kids would look back and wish we had said no. If we had full beginning-to-end knowledge of God's will, we would always agree with what he does in our lives. Let that reminder define your here and now, because it will define your future!
