Perseverance→Sanctification→Glorification

As a kid, any time my family would take a vacation I would always constantly ask, are we there yet? Even as an adult any time I'm going somewhere I can't wait to get there. I think that it is a natural inclination for most humans to want to immediately reach the destination we are heading towards. I find that to be especially true in our relationship with Christ. All Christians long to be in eternity with Jesus because we know that ultimately that is the destination that we excitedly await. Though we desire to hurry up and get there, we must not miss the beauty of waiting.

In the waiting we experience the ebb and flow of life on earth. That comes with times that are great and times that are not so great. For Christians, it requires perseverance. The trials we face have a purpose. We do not persevere in vain. Our perseverance produces sanctification. The difficulties that we face point us to confide in the only one who can perfectly comfort and care for us in our time of need. We can rejoice in the trial because we know that God will grow us through it.

The beauty of the waiting is that through our perseverance we are being made more like Christ. All Christ followers should long for the day that we are reunited with Christ in eternity, while not forgetting that God has a purpose for us as we wait. While you wait: Be faithful to Christ, seek him diligently, love His people, and share His truth. In the time that you wait praise God that perseverance produces sanctification, and its destination is glorification in eternity with Christ.

Philippians 1:6 And I am sure of this, that he who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ.
